Foreword

THE OLD CHOCTAW SALUTATION, "GOOD FRIEND," IS FITTINGLY THE NAME OF OUR ANNUAL. OUR DESIRE IS TO SO RECORD THE ASSOCIATIONS OF GOOD FRIENDS THAT IN FUTURE YEARS THE BOBASHELA SHALL BE THE MEDIUM OF RECALLING PLEASANT THOUGHTS AND OF KEEPING ALIVE IN US THE OLD MILLSAPS SPIRIT. IF THIS VOLUME CAN HALLOW THE MEMORIES OF THE PAST, GIVE JOY IN THE PRESENT, OR HOLD FORTH ANY HOPE FOR THE FUTURE, WE FEEL WE SHALL HAVE ACHIEVED SUCCESS.

Alumni Association

AN alumni association is helpful to any institution. It is also beneficial to every member of the association. Every alumnus and alumna of our Alma Mater has much in common, and these ties that bind should not be ignored. Every man and woman likes to turn backward in memory to the good old days spent about these old halls of learning, and every loyal alumnus desires to see again the old campus, the old professors, the old classmates and to be reminded of the hallowed associations there. The alumni association fills such a need. Every former student, whether old or young, feels that he or she has a common heritage, and we believe that the members of the Millsaps Alumni Association are taking a renewed interest in the old school. The secretary is compiling a complete roster of the old Millsaps students. Also the expression of interest during the football season was especially notable and fully appreciated by the student body. To our older brothers and sisters, all honor be!

COLUMBIA, MISS.

Master of Arts

A. B. Millsaps College, '20; Geiger Chemistry Medal, '18; Founder's Medal, '20; Instructor in Chemistry and Mathematics; G. L. S.; Y. M. C. A.; S. C.; American Legion.

Leo is a splendid student as his record shows. He has gained for himself a reputation as a teacher who is the master of his subjects. His broad foundation of learning should assure him success in whatever work he takes up.

COLLYE WELLMAN ALFORD

MAGNOLIA, MISS.

Bachelor of Arts

Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, '20; President Preachers' League, '20; Vice-President G. L. S., '20; Secretary G. L. S., '20; Commencement Debater, '20; President Y. M. C. A., '21; Bobashela Staff, '21; Chaplain American Legion, '20; Overseas Club; Freshman Declamation Medal, '16; Delegate to Blue Ridge, '20.

Collie has long been one of the most popular men on the Millsaps campus. Probably no man has more genuine friends, and he richly deserves them. Collie Alford is sound to the core. That hearty handshake of his is not easily forgotten.

MARVIN MCKENDREE BLACK, JR., K A

JACKSON, MISS.

Bachelor of Arts

L. L. S.; Orchestra, '16, '17, '18, '19; Glee Club '18, '19, '20; Tennis Team, '18, '19, '20, '21; Science Club; Business Manager Glee Club, '19-'20; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, '21; Vice-President Science Club, '20; President Right Royal Ramblers, '21; Vice-President Senior Class; Anniversary L. L. S.; P. & W. Staff, '19, '20, '21; Bobashela Staff '21; Delegate to Blue Ridge, '20.

Very dependable, witty, and likable, Marvin is a friend of every one who knows him. We expect Marvin to "make good."

MATTEE B. BULLARD, K Δ

JACKSON, MISS.

Bachelor of Arts

Y. W. C. A.; Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, '18, '19, '20; Treasurer Sophomore Class, '19; Vice-President Junior Class, '20; Pan-Hellenic Council, '20, '21; Honor Council, '20, '21; Sponsor Basketball, '20; Purple and White Staff, '20, '21; Associate Editor Bobashela, '21; Literary Council.

Mattee has always been one of the leading co-eds at Millsaps since the day she first entered these halls of learning. We are indeed proud to have her in the Class of '21. She has won every honor by genuine merit and is held in the highest esteem by everyone.

LEONARD CALHOUN, K Δ, Σ Y

JACKSON, MISS.

Bachelor of Arts

Y. M. C. A.; L. L. Endowed with a keen mind and great executive ability, Leonard has made us an admirable president. His less brilliant thoughts run in the channels of "Marvin, Marvin, where art thou?"

ANNIE IRENE CRISLER, K Δ

JACKSON, MISS.

Bachelor of Science

Y. W. C. A.; Poet Junior Class; Sponsor Junior Class; Secretary Senior Class.

"Deedle" is a jolly, good friend of everyone. She has made a host of them while at Millsaps, and we expect Deedle to continue to shine wherever she may go.

Here is a man that is one of our famous "come backs." Though he entered late in the year he has made good, and we believe he will make good everywhere he goes.

THE BOBASHELA

History of the Class of '21

THE opening of the session of 1917-18 was one of unusual importance, for at this time the great Class of '21 entered Millsaps College. They were, as you might say, young, green, and fresh, but nevertheless soon grew accustomed to the ways of the college, and were no longer afraid of Sully's gruff glances or Ducky's sarcastic remarks. In the spring of this year, when the old campus was at its prettiest, the students of the college could be seen drilling on every bright afternoon. The United States had entered the war and the students of Millsaps were showing their patriotism by preparing themselves for future service. The Class of '21 was not left out in these military practices and even the co-eds were privileged to drill.

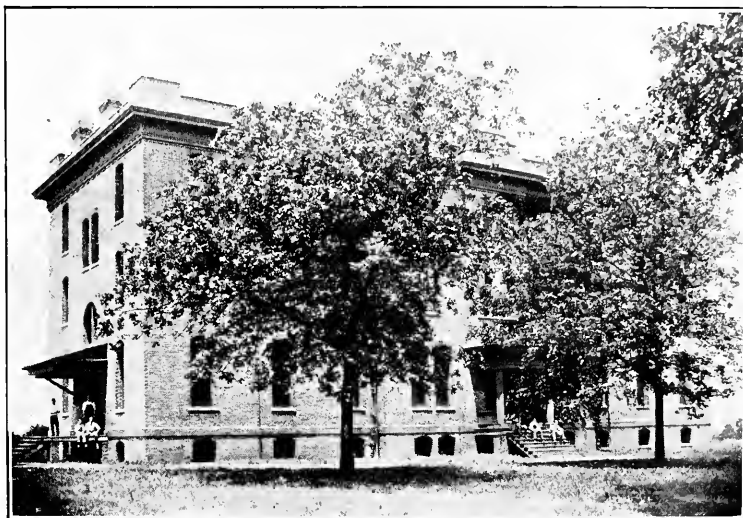

The scene shifts to the fall of 1918, when Millsaps College was turned topsy turvy. It was now a government school for the Students Army Training Corps. The old peaceful walks were trod by many heavy army shoes, while the campus was turned into a military camp. The Class of '21 was at this time very wise and proud sophomores, forgetting the time when they were freshmen and not even deigning to wish to be juniors. This class joined with the rest of the college in the celebration of Armistice Day. Soon after this date the S. A. T. C. was disbanded, and the college returned to its normal activities.

The next year slipped by, the Class of '21 being junior, only living and hoping for the great and glorious time when they would be seniors.

The Class of '21 came back to school in 1920 high and mighty seniors. This was the first year that Millsaps College had played intercollegiate football, and the Class of '21 was very glad that this was inaugurated while the class was still an active part of the student body.

After this class had received their diplomas they scattered to different parts of the world, their graduation being the true commencement of their lives. As they go on their various paths, each holds dear the memory of his alma mater and strives to be worthy of her teaching.

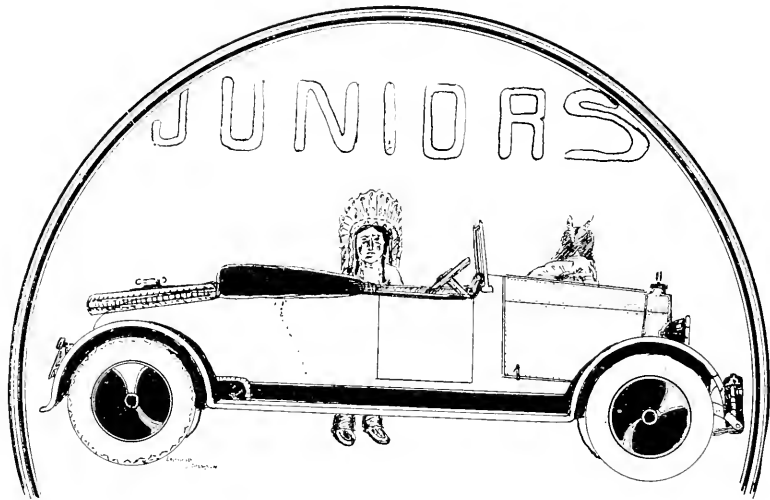

THE BOBASHELA

College Night

COLLEGE night is an unusual event, held under the direction of the Y. M. C. A. and celebrated by the students on the Friday evening following the opening of school. This occasion holds an important place in the minds of the students, because it gives the old and the new students, as well as the alumni, a chance to become acquainted in an informal manner. The freshmen are given their first glimpse of college life and are welcomed into its activities by talks from a representative of the Purple and White staff, Bobashela staff, Athletic Council, Honor Council, literary societies, American Legion, Y. M. C. A., and Y. W. C. A. Since many of the new students are not familiar with the nature of these organizations, they are afforded an opportunity early in their college life to acquaint themselves with the work. This meeting arouses much enthusiasm among the old students, as it brings back memories of other years and compares them with prospects for the new.

Entertaining features, consisting of music and stunts, comprise a part of the program, and the climax is reached in college songs and yells. The social hour that follows is by no means a small part of the evening's pleasure, for it is here that each knows the other as his fellow student. This is one of the most enjoyable occasions of the year, for it never fails to give expression to the true Millsaps spirit.

THE BOBASHELA

Blue Ridge

AMONG the many valuable features of the Y. M. C. A. is the opportunity to attend the Southern Students' Conference, which convenes in Blue Ridge, N. C., every summer.

The conference grounds are situated in a cluster of mountains where the fresh breezes are laden with the odor of mountain flowers and the scenery of distant hills and golden sunsets is grand beyond description.

Fifteen Millsaps students and two professors attended that conference last summer. On their way they passed through the French Broad River valley where the waterfalls and towering hills gave their first hint of the place to which they were going.

After reaching Blue Ridge these men became famous mountain hikers, hearing the message that nature has for those who go to the woods where "no tears dim the sweet look that nature wears." Some of these men continued to take part in this outdoor life in the athletic games and contests in which three of our men won honors.

There was amid this beauty of nature and enjoyment, a voice to the hundreds of students as they associated together and entered the services calling them to a higher life of unselfish service to humanity. The program was carefully planned to a regular schedule. The work consists of class work each morning in which the student could select the subject he wished. Such subjects as "The Social Principles of Jesus," "Negro Life in the South," "Missions," etc., were studied. The instructors were men picked from the various colleges and universities.

One hour each day was given to public meetings, where there was heard some of the world's greatest men and best speakers. These were hours of inspiration when students, teachers, ministers, statesmen, and missionaries were gathered in one great body with one great purpose, to know the man of Galilee and carry His spirit to others.

Mass singing and college yells were enjoyed in the dining hall, and in the Robert E. Lee Hall one whole evening was given on stunt night for the demonstration of college spirit. In the singing program the Millsaps quartet was often called on for a "peppy" number.

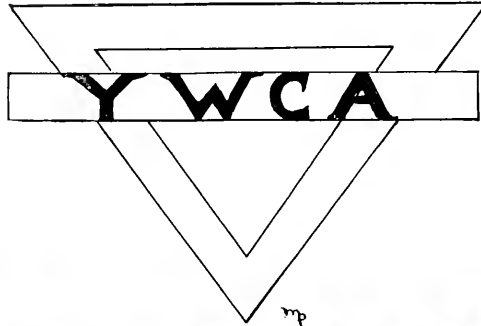

It has been said that no student can attend the Blue Ridge conference and then be the same person again. If he really lives in that atmosphere he will be, he must be, a bigger, better man.

"Blue Ridge, with the mountains encircling,
And the valley that lies between;
The sun in his glorious splendor,
Bathing all in a golden sheen.

"Blue Ridge, with its fun and its laughter,
With its days and nights of delight;
Where the voices of children sound sweeter,
And the dim eyes of age grow more bright.

"Blue Ridge, with its splendid endeavor,
With its spirit and high, holy light;
O help us, Great Master in heaven,
To go forth and stand for the right."

"The Jelly-Bean"

OLY gee," muttered Red, without stopping. "Whatta peach." Slowly the big car neared him, the voice of the gay crowd growing louder and more boisterous with every yard.

"Sweet mamma," he breathed almost reverently as it drew nigh upon him. "Wonder if she'll be at the dance," and this last was his natural thought, for Red Williams was a jelly bean and had been gliding down the street with that strange gait known only to the species, a queer cross between a walk and a dance.

Now of all the lower order of beings, the jelly-bean is the most misunderstood and the most harmless. He is, to begin with, the most creased and spotless, but nevertheless apologizing every minute for his shoddy personal appearance. Though ordinarily possessed with a remarkably small amount of "book sense," the make-up of the jelly-bean does not necessarily exclude learning. Education, however is a luxury hardly desirable, since society requires only that one be versed in the vernacular of the day and "handle a wicked line." Next in order of importance is dancing. There is as much chance to bribe St. Peter at the gate as there is to be a jelly-bean without being able to obey the impulses inspired by the wailings of a syncopated orchestra. The finishing touch and mark of recognition is this: down the exact center of his head runs a white part. Just such a person as this was Red, who progressed that August afternoon down Capital Street, the main business thoroughfare of Jackson, Mississippi.

Reaching the Post Office he leaned his sloping shoulders against a lamp-post, lit a cigarette, and thus easily poed, fell into a reverie about the fair vision who had just that second passed him at the wheel of a powerful motor.

What a profile as she passed! How he did love those little turned-up noses! And those big brown eyes, like a deer's, he thought. Oh Daddy! Didn't that hat show off her bobbed hair! Where was she from? Would she—?

"Whonk, whank," came the sharp horn of another car.

"Come on, Red," called a cooing voice, and his mental operations snapped like a twig. As he looked around a crowd was pulling up to the curb to pick him up. Needless to say, Red piled in on the back seat.

"What's the matter, son," kidded fellow jelly, "gone to sleep on that post?"

"Has some visitor for the dance chloroformed you?" joined a girl of the party. "John Roberts is absolutely cracked about this Babe Wright from Delta. And so is Nolan and William and Tom and everybody else, and the funny thing about it is she hasn't been here more than two hours and none of them have met her. They just know who she is because some traveling man at the hotel told them, and they knew because he sold goods to her father's plantation store and had seen her there at the place. I'm so scared I won't have a good time at the dance tonight that I'm almost petrified. Bess and I were just talking about we didn't believe we would go. Weren't we, Bess?"

What Bess said Red never knew. Immediately after flapper number one had spilled her fund of information, Red remembered he had very important business down town, and leaving the party too abruptly to be polite, he hastened back down the street to the hotel, to find this all-wise traveling man.

"What's Red mooning about?" asked one of the bunch that he had left. "Do you suppose he's seen this bob-haired chicken and fallen for her like the rest?"

"I hope he has," put in Bess Walker. "It would serve him right. Going around here bragging about never having fallen for anybody, it would do him good for some vamp like her to string him as high as a kite and then let him dangle. You know how he did Mildred, don't you?"

"Yes," answered several together. Bess continued, "He went to see her for a while and fed her this line about her being the only girl in the world, and such stuff as that, and just when she began believing him and got to where she would break dates with other boys for him, he tells her that he had just been joking all along and asked her if she had really believed him."

"Somebody will hand him a cold deal some of these days. Just you watch," was the rather unmeaning comment of another.

Before more was said Robert, who was driving and saying remarkably little, decided to end the ride, and without further ceremony, for jelly-beans do not tolerate formality, he took the two girls to their respective homes in the same block, and turned the nose of the car toward the city.

"Where are we going now?" asked his pal indifferently.

"To the hotel," was the short response.

In the meantime Red had had little luck. He had received no promise of an introduction before the dance, he could find no assurance of getting a date with her, he did not even learn who it was she was visiting. When Robert walked into the lobby on the same mission he found already congregated nearly the entire stock of Jackson boys. But they did not stay congregated long for each realized that in such a crowd nothing could be done, and each one was frank to admit that it was not a charity affair, and just what information anyone got belonged solely to himself, to use in any way for his advancement in the court of this brown-eyed queen. In this frame of mind they had all left the hotel in a short while to dress for that eventful dance.

II

To thoroughly understand this story, to know just what I mean by a Delta vamp, it is necessary to know just a little about the delta of the Yazoo River.

To begin with, it is a new country, or at least only lately developed, and the land in that section grows the finest cotton in the world. Even the fine staples of India and Egypt do not compare with it, and the planters who raise it grow suddenly wealthy practically overnight. When the price of cotton advances one cent the delta goes wild with joy. When it drops a few cents, it goes broke. Consequently in this land of the newly rich, of cotton gamblers, of headlong plungers and life long regretters, there has grown up a spirit of recklessness and worldliness that is unequalled anywhere in America. A man wealthy one day may be poor the next. If he makes a large sum of money easily he plunges it all right away into some wild venture and either becomes a millionaire or not only loses his gain but his house and home, the very clothes on his back. The influence of such changing fortune, such plunging, such riotous living, is clearly marked in every level of society there.

From under such influence came Helen Wright, alias Babe, and it was because of this that all of the many things that had happened to the sleepy society of Jackson, her visit was the most like that of a whirlwind, gathering first all obstacles into its vortex, and then casting them aside, broken and unrecognizable.

So it was that Babe Wright happened in Jackson that day, not as a visitor to any home but in an automobile party, her mother chaperoning, which was to go back on the next day a hundred miles through the country, after resting a few hours at the hotel.

The time when she first burst in on the floor at the Elks ball room will be a moment long remembered in the annals of Jackson jazz. Arrayed in a daring costume of black, dazzling with jetbeads, she came into the hall at almost a run, and pausing for just a moment barely inside, shook her bobbed hair and made the classic remark: "I feel like the last day of a misfit life." And a line of boys the entire length of the hall formed to meet her, hungrily waiting for any kind soul who might introduce them, to do so.

Needless to say Babe Wright got a crush, and a big one, in which Red Williams played no little part. He, having always been rather a successful manipulator of social puzzles, had managed to be one of her earliest new acquaintances, and although he was unable to make a date with her for an intermission, when he perhaps might be able to talk with better results, had, nevertheless, secured two breaks, in which he thought he could accomplish something.

In the first of these no-breaks Red thought he was doing very well, and Babe had not a shadow of a doubt that she was succeeding nobly. She was a vamp "par excellence," and changed her mode of attack with each change of subject. Her conversation with Red was in part as follows:

"Well, I'm back again, Babe. Think I'll move to the Delta.

"Why move to the Delta, Red? Can I call you Red? I feel like we are such unusually good friends already, and then I'm just crazy about red-headed people anyhow."

"Now don't kid me, Sugar, I'll believe every word you say."

"Do you really, Red? I'm so glad you do. So many people think I'm insincere, but you know I'm telling you the truth. You're so big and strong and I feel so safe when I'm dancing with you, 'cause I'm so little, and I just couldn't be insincere to you, could I?"

Silence reigned for several moments, while Red groped in mental darkness after Babe had hurled this bomb into his supply of thought.

"What's the matter? Did I hurt your feelings, Red?" Red sucked in his breath.

"No," he gulped at last, helplessly. He had at last met his match, and the music ended mercifully just in time to keep him from going into a complete trance. He had swallowed it hook, line and sinker.

Red's next no-break was the same, only this time it came in double doses. He t.ood on air, walked in a rosy haze, as the poet says. O Boy! Think of being high man with such a dame as that one. And that last, long look she gave him out of those soft brown eyes when she said, "Red, I've had such a good time. You've been so good to me. Good night, Red. Think of me sometimes, will you?"

"Would he? Ye gods! Was he a man of stone? Red felt as if his victory had been complete, and that night he slept the glorious, satisfying sleep of the innocent.

III

The next morning Red rose late, still in his rosy dream. He was unable to choke down any breakfast at all, and walked the mile from his house to town in actual preference to riding. All morning he walked the streets, purposely avoiding any company whatever, in hopes of seeing just once more this priceless jewel of perfection.

O kindly fates! At or about one o'clock her party had partaken of a small repast and leaving the hotel had piled into the car for the homeward trip. Red on his regular rounds espied them and rushed up for his last farewell. And Babe (O how good it is to live, he thought) had evidenced the same pleasure at seeing him that he did at seeing her. And in this grand rush of goodbyes, a little to one side, she squeezed his hand and said, "Red, you're the grandest man. Won't you write to me?"

Poor Red, half stunned, looked up and they had gone before he could sufficiently gather himself together to answer.

Red did write, that very night, a long, touching masterpiece of many folders. And O, how sweet is love! Before three days' time he had an answer. It began thusly: "My great big red-headed caveman," and ended with a flourish just as eloquent and inspired. The letter consisted of one long elaboration of the thought that all she wanted to make her perfectly happy was to see him once more. Red muttered a solemn ditto.

It never rains but it pours. The very next day he got an invitation from the Midnight Club to a dance, requesting that he bring any lady. How admirably that suited him.

Late that afternoon he walked to the telephone.

"Give me Long Distance," he bawled.

"Long Distance, hello, Long Distance! Is that Long Distance? Hello, Sugar, listen, I want to talk to Miss Helen Wright of Clarksdale. You know who I am. Yes, that's right. Well, charge it to our phone, and try to get her before morning. All right. Much obliged. The number? O, yes, 2640. Well ta, ta, goodbye!"

A long half hour he waited, impatiently, in the hall. Then the bell rang long and lustily. He sprang at the receiver and yelled, "Hello."

First he looked puzzled, then angry. "What," he said. "No, this is not the Charity Hospital," and banged the receiver on the hook.

Ten minutes later the phone rang again. This time he answered more cheerfully.

"Hello! Hello! Wha—wha—WHAT?" His face was a study.

"What you say? New Orleans? Married? What! When, you say? Yesterday?"

The receiver dropped from his hand. Slowly he walked out of the front door. As he did so, two girls rode by in a car. They were Bess and Mildred.

"Hello, Red!" they called.

Red answered not, but strolled miserably out on the lawn, and the summer sun, setting in a riot of color, cast a long, lone, much drooping shadow across the yard. He had been strung in good fashion."

"M" CLUB

THE BOBASHELA

Dr. Key has been our faculty director of athletics for four years. During that time he has won the admiration and highest respect of the student body by his efficient management. Clean athletics is his motto, and while he is at the helm we can be sure that Millsaps athletics will always be on the level.

We know what Coach Bales can do and has done, and the student body believes in him. He has been on the campus for two years, and his friendly, congenial manner has won him a host of friends.

THE BOBASHELA

Coach Carpenter, better known as "Baby," was always on his job. His knowledge of football was of the highest standard. He was soul and body for each and every one of the squad. His motto was "fight, fight, and fight hard."

The student body showed good judgment in selecting for this important position of student manager John Davis Musselwhite. He has shown himself thoroughly capable in the supervision of the various branches of athletics.

Athletics

THE arrival of Millsaps in the football world was not heralded by any brilliant success on the gridiron, but no such thing was expected as this was our first year and the majority of the team was raw material. At the end of the season there was a marked improvement in the work of the team and as we expect practically all of this year's varsity back we feel that next year, under the capable management of Coach Bales, we will be able to make a much better success on the gridiron. We had a very good schedule, including Mississippi College, Howard, and Springhill, and we hope to play these teams next year on a more even basis.

We are now facing our basketball season and believe that it will prove to be a very successful one. Coach Bales has rounded into shape a quintette that we think will be hard to beat. Much interest is being shown in basketball and there is much competition for places on the team.

Looking over the material now on the campus we feel sure that we will put out a creditable baseball team and we hope once more to be able to carry away Mississippi College's goat.

Track is coming to occupy a larger place in athletics at Millsaps and we are planning this year to take part in S. I. A. A. track as in other sports.

Under the supervision of Coach Bales all freshmen are required to take two hours of athletics each week. This is a new event in the freshman life at Millsaps. We feel that besides developing them physically this exercise may bring out good material for our different teams.

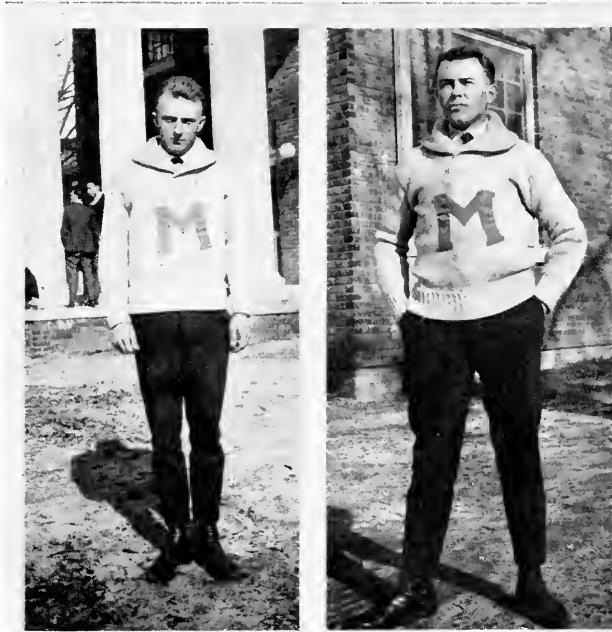

THE BOBASHELA

Quiet—but you know what a dynamo is like. Believes that actions speak louder than words, and acts accordingly. “Ship” has a good head on him, which means that his opponents have to work, work, work, or get left.

We knew that Stokes, when elected baseball manager, would throw himself wholeheartedly into the work, and we were not disappointed, as is evidenced by the good schedule he has arranged.

THE BOBASHELA

Coursey certainly made it worth while for the men to make the basketball team for he has worked up one of the best schedules the team has had for a number of years. And don't forget he is a crack tennis man, too.

We believe that it would have been impossible to get a better man for track manager than Dawkins. He is enthusiastic over anything connected with track, and has done more than anyone else to arouse interest in this branch of athletics.

Humor

Senior: "Why slaughter the elephants in Africa when there is so much ivory in the Freshman Class?"
Freshman: "I-?-?-?-?"

Hebert: "Say, can you give a reason why board is so high and then we rarely ever get any meat to eat at the dormitory?"

Ellis: "Oh yes, it costs money these days even to read about meat, you bet your bottom dollar. Just a short while ago the original manuscript of Lamb's essay on "Roast Pig" sold for $12,600."

It is hard to convince a freshman that it is better to have loved and lost after he has balanced his bank account.

* * *

Prof. Lin: "What happened to Babylon?"

Poole: "It fell."

Prof.: "What happened to Tyre?"

Poole: "It was punctured."

* * *

Dr. Watkins meets his daughter on way to main building—"Hello, my daughter, how is you father today?"

"Cheer up, Rawls, don't worry about that girl. Remember there's o'her fish in the sea."

Rawls: "Yes, but the last one took all my bait."

Musselwhite to Joe Abney: "Say, Joe, we have women voters now."

Joe: "Yes, and these short skirts make a lot of women look like little girls."

Musselwhite: "That's right, you got to be careful who you try to pat on the head."

Miss —: "I hate to think of my twentieth birthday."

Lansford: "Please don't bring up the past."

* * *

Windham: "Was she violent when you asked her to be your bride?"

Fish: "Was she? Great scott, I thought she would squeeze me to death!"

Sharp: "I thought you had Chemistry last year."

Hollingsworth: "I did, but Sully encored me."

Hunt in Caesar Class: "What did Caesar exclaim when Brutus stabbed him?"

Freshman Gant: "Ouch."

In Education I: "Why will a man take a university course to be a farmer?"

Coursey: "To aid him in arguing with his mules."

Bronco in Math: "But goodness gracious, your analysis of that problem has such a hollow ring."

Freshie: "Yes, doctor; that's the result of speaking with such an empty stomach."

In Sociology Class: "What animal makes the nearest approach to man?"

Leigh Watkins: "The cootie."

Freshman Winstead to little boy: "Do you ever peep through the key hole when I am sitting in the parlor with your sister?"

Small Brother (with a burst of laughter): "Sometimes, when mother ain't there looking."

Red Carr: "Are you good at your work? I am very particular about the way my hair is cut."

Dad: "Well, I'm reckoned fairly decent, but if you like I'll do one side of your head first so that you can look for yourself."

* * *

Joe Abney: "I don't see why Dr. Watkins don't have some steam in these inspirators."

* * *

Dr. Mitchell: "How do you make V equal X?"

Ellis: "I don't know. If I did I wouldn't be broke so often."

Humor

Prof. Lin in History: "Mr. Watkins, why are you so proud that you live in a large country?"

Leight: "Because I would have more room to retreat when the enemy invaded us."

Hambone: "The three hardest things in the world to do are:

"First, to make a speech.

"Second, to climb a rail leaning toward me.

"Third, to court a girl leaning from me."

Dr. Sullivan and Prof. Harrel on way to town.—Car trouble.

Prof. Harrell: "Say, Sully, we have it now."

Prof. Sullivan: "What? Red, what do you mean?"

Prof. Harrell: "Perpetual motion—I can't stop her."

* * *

After Ray had completed his new course in the alphabet under Windham's instruction, he was heard to ask if Adam was the first man.

Bailey: "Yes, why?"

Ray: "Didn't he have any upperclassmen?"

Bailey: "Why no, of course not."

Ray (still rubbing where Windham had been): "But I know he was a lucky guy."

In Chemistry Class: "Now, young gentlemen, in what combination is gold most quickly released?"

W. N. Ware: "Marriage."

John Rutledge practicing scripture for the Y. M. C. A. meeting: "Much words maketh a joyful noise."

DISCUSSING ECONOMICS

Ouida Crawford: "Right now there are four thousand avocations open to women."

Bailey: "What are they?"

Ouida: "One of them is marriage, another is—is—dear me, I—I have forgotten the others."

* * *

Sully in Zoology: "Where do bugs go in winter?"

Shorty Baird: "Search me."

Hambone in German class: "Miss Crawford, please parse 'kiss'."

Miss Daley: "A kiss is a noun used as a conjunction, more common than proper, never declined, used in the plural with 'we.'"

DEDICATED TO HASH

Tell me not in mournful numbers,

That we meet again today,

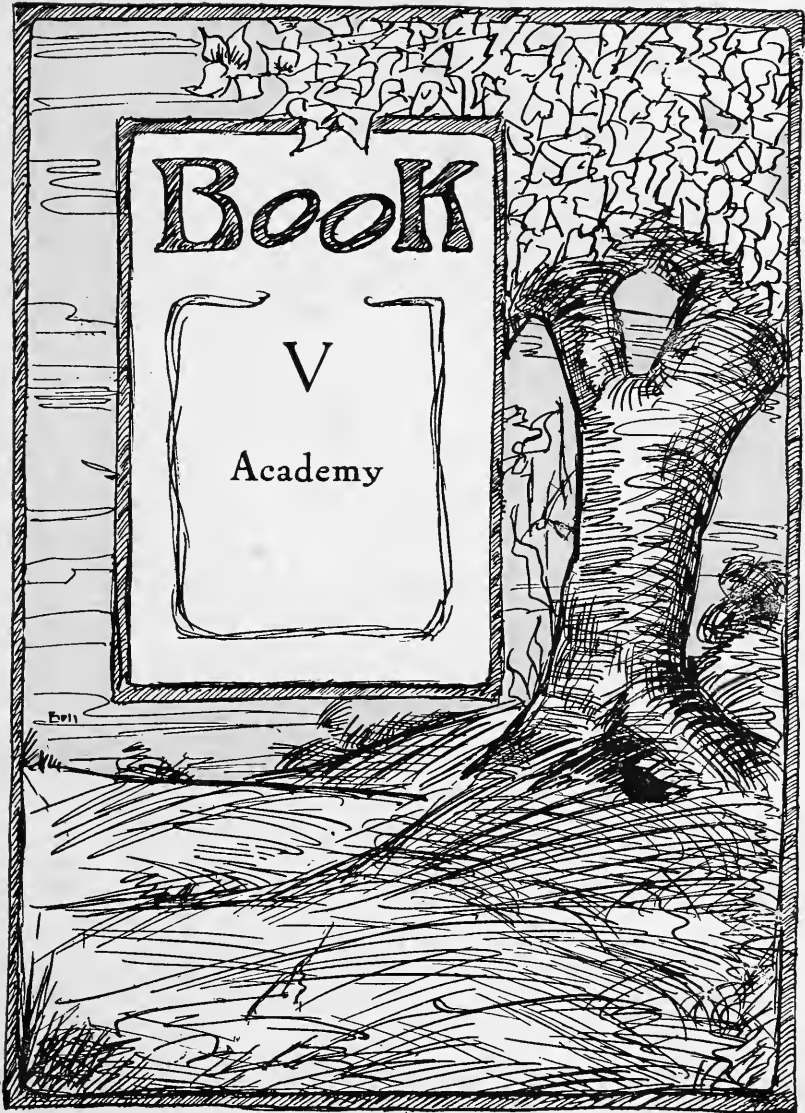

All the scraps we left on Sunday,

In hash we eat today.

Ada: "Fess up now, B., that you boys like talkative girls as well as you do others."

B.: "What others?"
